

The Candid Frame: A Photography Podcast

The world's best interview show about photographers and their photography.

HomePhoto BlogBioOnline Courses

TUESDAY, JULY 19, 2011

The Candid Frame #117 - Alia Malley

Alia Malley is a fine-art photographer who's landscapes of Southern California reveal a different aspect of the City of Angels than is popularized in television and film. Her photographs capture the natural scenes that exist in the midst of urban sprawl, and make connections not only to the city's current populace but also to the people of the recent and the distant past who have called SoCal home. Her recent effort to publish a book of her series of images entitled "A Cavalier in Sight of a Village" resulted in a very successful attempt of crowd-funding using Kickstarter. You can discover more of her work by visiting her website and her Kickstarter page.

Alia Malley recommends the work of Todd Hido.

For streaming audio click here or subscribe to the podcast for free via

iTunes